APOLLO CONCERT DRAWS BIG CROWD

Dr. Clarence Eddy and Herbert Gould
Please Audience at Last Popular Concert of Season.

Between six and eight hundred people filled the First Congregational church last evening for the extra concert of the Apollo club, at which Dr. Clarence Eddy, organist, and Herbert Gould, basso, charmed their audience with the beauty of their work. Perhaps the most gratifying feature of the event from a local point of view, was the staid and capacity for appreciation of the audience. For some time George S. Parker, with other directors of the club, has felt that Janesville would welcome something of a public event, given at exceedingly popular prices. Though as yet no definite plans for the next season have been made, it is expected that a series of last evening's entertainment will largely influence the club in conducting an entire season of public recitals.

Dr. Eddy, who is unquestionably recognized as the country's (if not the world's) leading organist, will leave a lasting impression on the hearts of his hearers. His playing was technically perfect, emotionally and interpretatively inspiring. He plays with a breadth and depth of feeling, which when expressed on the organ, is remarkably effective, one moment stirring and the next lulling with the soft, purring notes of the upper register.

"The Russian Boatman's Song" was particularly beautiful. "Evangelist" and a composition by William Woltenholme, the famous blind organist of London, were popular.

Herbert Gould made a most pleasing impression with a fine bass voice of warmth and ample range, a voice brilliant in its high notes, rich and resonant in the low notes. The flexibility of his voice was admirably brought out in his "Bitterness of Love," which met with great favor.

Mr. Gould was accompanied on the piano by Miss Grace Murphy of this city, who again illustrated her true ability as a musician and artist. Miss Murphy plays with the easy assurance of a master technician and with a sympathetic interpretation of songs that bespeak a fundamentally musical soul.

IF WE ONLY UNDERSTOOD

A middle-aged and still very attractive woman lost her husband. She had two children and needed a particular kind of training. She went to the big city near which she lived and applied for a position with one of the shops. The position given her was that of a shopper. That meant that her work was to go about with the other shops, comparing values, and with these her own store offered, and putting ideas of a varnisher like a lady of leisure and appear to be merely a shopper. Also, she was not supposed to tell even her friends of her position.

That was only one of many experiences (my own and other people's) that showed me how much we need to realize that "we should love each other better if we only understood." Surely we all commit acts that we know might be wrongly construed by those who do not know the conditions. Why, then, cannot we then have the patience and forbearance not to judge others so hastily?

O, better still, not to judge at all.

Maya. Oh Maya, my Indian maid,
You put all the Paris belles quite in the shade;
Your colorful blanket so gaudy and rich,
They've taken for mantles, skirts

But you want a blanket that much as I hate to lose my blanket, an acquaintance will tell you that you'd better go to Guatemala for it. Or rather the house that is making Mayan specialties will have to import one from there. It strikes me that the most authentic way to import a Maya instead of a slave is to import a blanket. Think how handy it would be to have a little Maya in your home business weaving your blankets for you while you wait.

The main point is that we have to be good Indians this season. At present a Maya costume is more swaggy than a Poirer model, a Maya skirt is more than a Georgeanna skirt. At the beginning of the war Paris trembled lest New York usurp her laurels as the fashion center of the world. We must have dreamed that the mantle of fashionable dress would have descended on Guatemala in Central America instead and in descending turn into an Indian blanket.

I am so proud of him and love him so; and Father, Jaynes and Jukie couldn't treat me better if I really belonged to them."

from down street and stopped warm myself in front of the grocery store. She happened in and stood looking at me. I did not want to turn and run the minute she entered. Finally she said: "I would not make myself conspicuous if we were your family. She always says regards for regard."

"Why, you simply cannot stay this sort of thing. It will drive you mad," flamed Marjory. "You had Clyde bring you down here in the machine every noon when he got back to the factory; and can't you and get your own way home and eat at night?"

"How lovely of you." The tears

"You do belong here," she said. "I can tell. Mr. Jaynes thinks you are the dearest thing I've ever had happen," interrupted Mary, a ghost of a smile returning to her face as she made her effort to comfort her day I was trying very hard with her. She can't talk on her own, you see. I was something about how Clyde

"You disgrace Clyde," indeed!"

"Dear Julie. You must bring me with you some time when you come down here. What a life to be so up with that woman." Marjorie's tone was unlike her, it was so brutal.

WHERE ROUND WORMS COME FROM

My friend, the fishwife, who tries to shove upon every phase of life upon her children, assumes that worms grow, like Topsy, from dirt, par-rot or brimstone. She is generous enough, however, to provide a noble nutriment for the worms she feeds on poor innocent children. I am glad she pleases the fishwife's imagination, but I do not share the notion that dirt and sweets "make worms." I suppose any intelligent parent would know that a child craves and that a penny of sugar and sweets is a constant consideration the chief element in a baby's natural food; and that sugar is one of the most wholesome strength-giving and digestible of all child or adult can take.

My friend has made a scientific worm (Aecaris lumbricoides). So when the fishwife of your neighborhood gossip assures you that Johnny has worms, when he is sick, lying down with colic, acidosis, measles, or cold, or all the above, and cake and candy he could eat for dessert. Say: "Rats!"

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Discharge. Fishwife.

I would tell me from what you think. I am nursing a child three weeks old. There is a tender, rather hardened area the size of an egg above and to one side of the navel. I feel chilly but the temperature the past three days. My nurse tells me I have taken cold in breast by going out too soon in the cold weather. What shall I do.

Q. Answer—Better send for your doctor. You are probably preparing to have an abscess. Undoubtedly the abscess is not unlikely responsible for the unclean ones always. I charge it to "taking cold."

Q. I'll with your opinion.

A. Kindly send me your opinion of course of gentle massage for a person who has been confined to bed for several years with a head ailment. She is very sensitive. She is very sensitive to being touched and fears the massage will disturb her too much.

Q. Answer—Do not advise it. Repassive movements, succeeded by active movements, very gently and very gradually increased, to week or two. Then get the patient on to chair and out in the air everyday. If myocardiitis alone is determined (which muscle) there is weakness of the muscle, there is no reason why the patient should be confined to bed. I fear there is of mental treatment to get rid of illusion.

Flats.
A flat is a place with no room for expansion, intellectual or chest.
It requires thin furniture and a narrow wife. The rooms are so small you fit in a wicker chair, a coat and a winter hat, and your winter clothing. And it's no place for a man with a stomach if you won't want the walls to bulge. It's a place where flat dwellers have to be carefully trained so they won't walk out in the back yard and fall off the roof. It's a place where a man who said any old place he could hang his hat was home, sweet home to him went to live in a flat he had no hat on and no home. Instead, he had a porch and a back yard anyhow.
But what's a man with a $25 income going to do with an $10 disposition in a 254 flat?

CHAPTER VII.

A Ranger's Horse.

Onward through the dense foliage the two friends went. Now and then they stopped to listen, but the rain was heavy enough to drown all other noises. Encountering fresh tracks finally, Dave leaned from his saddle and studied them. He had gone perhaps half a mile when Bessie Belle raised her head, and he noted that her nostrils were working sensitively. Law laughed that he could detect the smell of a wood fire. Further along they came to a place where the brush was low, and there, rising through the treetops beyond, he saw a wavering plume of blue smoke.

The Ranger rode into sight of the branding fire with his repeater across his saddle horn and his thumb upon the hammer; what followed came with almost the blinding suddenness of a lightning crash. First there was the picture of a sandy glade, in the center of which burned a fire with branding irons in it, and a spotted calf died to a tree, but otherwise no sign of life. Then, without warning, Bessie Belle threw up her head in that characteristic trick of hers, and simultaneously Dave saw a figure rise out of the grass at his left with a rifle leveled. With the first jerk of his horse's head his own gun had leaped to his shoulder—he was not conscious of having willed it to do so—and even as he pressed the trigger he felt Bessie Belle give way. The next instant his feet, still in the stirrups, were on the ground and his horse lay between them, motionless. That nervous fling of her head had saved Dave's life, for the rustler's bullet had shattered her skull in its flight, and she lay prone, with scarcely a muscular twitch, so sudden had been her end.

For a moment the Ranger was dazed. He stood staring down at his pet; then the truth engulfed him. He realized that he had ridden her to her death, and at the thought he became like a woman bereft of her child, like a lover who had seen his sweetheart slain.

A shout—it was a hoarse, inarticulate cry; a swift, maddened scrutiny that searched the sodden scene of the ambush; then he was down beside the mare, calling her name heartbrokenly, his arms around her neck, his face against her warm, wet, velvet hide.

Law knew that two men had entered the thicket, and therefore one still remained to be reckoned with, but he gave no thought to that. From the corner of his eye he could see a pair of bootsoles staring at him out of the grass, and they told him there was no need for investigation. Near the body he heard the calf stirring, but he let it struggle.

Bessie Belle's bright eyes were glazing; she did not hear her lover's voice. Don Ricardo and his son burst out of the brush from opposite directions almost at the same moment, to find the Ranger with his face buried in his horse's mane.

"Caramba! What is this?" The old man flung himself from the saddle and came running. "You are injured!" Pedro, too, bent over the officer, his brown face pale with apprehension. "Mother of God!" breathed the latter. "It was a wild thing to do, to ride alone—"

"I'm all right," Law said, rising stiffly, whereupon both Mexicans voiced their relief.

"The saints be praised!" "SI! What happened? There was a shot! Did you see nothing?"

Law jerked his head in the direction of the fallen man at his back and Pedro uttered a loud cry.

"Look! Father and son ran through the grass, then recoiled and broke into a jargon of oaths and exclamations."

"Right in the mouth! The fellow was in death before he realized it."

"See! It is as we thought, Pedro; one of Lewis! Tse! Tse! Tse! What a sight!"

"Who is he?" queried the officer.

"Pino Garcia, one of the worst," chimed the two Guzmanas.

Ricardo was dancing in his excitement. "I told you that Lewis knew something. The other one got past me, but I cannot shoot like this."

It was difficult to secure a connected story from Ricardo, but he finally made it plain that at the first report the other thief had fled, exposing himself only long enough for the old man to take a quick shot in his direction.

Ricardo had missed, and the miscreant was doubtless well away by this time. He had ridden a sorrel horse that was all Ricardo could remember.

Law looked only briefly at the gruesome results of his marksmanship, then he turned back to the body of his beloved mare. Ricardo noticed at length that he was crying; as the Ranger knelt beside the dead thoroughbred, the old Mexican whispered to his son:

"Valgame Dios! This is a strange fellow. He weeps like a woman. He must have loved that horse as a man loves his wife. Who can understand these gringos?" After a time he approached cautiously and inquired:

"What shall we do with this horrible, senor? Pedro has found his horse."

Law roused himself. With his own hands he gently removed Bessie Belle's saddle, bridle and blanket, then he gave his orders.

"I'll take your horse, Ricardo, and you take that fellow's. Get a wagon and move him to Jonesville."

"And you?"

"I'm going to follow that man on the sorrel."

The dead man's saddle was left beside the body; then when the exchange of mounts had been effected, and all was ready, Law made a request that amazed both father and son.

"If I'm not back by morning, I want you to bury my mare." His voice broke; he turned away his face. "Bury her deep, Ricardo, so—the coyotes can't dig her up; right where she fell. I'll be back to see that it's done right. Understand?"

"Bueno! I understand perfectly. She was a pretty horse. She was your—hoola, eh? Well, you have a big heart, senor, as a brave man should have. Everything shall be done as you wish; I give you my hand on it."

Ricardo reached down and gripped Law's palm. "We will name our pasture for her, too, because it is plain you loved her dearly. So, then, until tomorrow."

Law watched his two friends ride away, then, with a miserable ache in his throat, he mounted and rode off to pick up the trail of the man on the sorrel pony.

The fellow had ridden in the direction of Las Palmas, which Dave judged must be fully twelve miles away, and when they continued to maintain this course the Ranger became doubly interested. He risked his own interpretation of the rider's intent and pushed on without pausing to search out the trail step by step. At the second gate the signs indicated that his man was little more than an hour ahead of him.

The prospect of again seeing the ruddy-haired mistress of Las Palmas stirred Law more deeply than he cared to admit. Nevertheless, he was uncomfortably aware that she had a husband. Not only so, but the sharp contrast in their positions was disagreeable to contemplate; she was unbelievably rich, and a person of influence in the state, while he had nothing except his health, his saddle and his horse—No; no horse now, she was gone.

The mist and an early dusk prevented him from seeing Las Palmas itself until he was well in among the irrigated fields. A few moments later, when he rode up to the outbuildings, he encountered a middle-aged Mexican, who proved to be Benito Gonzalez, the range boss.

Dave made himself known, and Benito answered his questions with apparent honesty. No, he had seen nothing of a sorrel horse or a strange rider, but he had just come in himself.

Doubtless they could learn more from Juan, the horse-wrangler, who was somewhere about.

Juan was finally found, but he proved strangely recalcitrant. He admitted that he had seen a horse of the description given. Probably it belonged to some stranger.

Dave changed his tactics. "Oiga!" he said, sternly. "Do you want to go to jail?" Juan had no such desire. "Then tell the truth. Where is the horse now?"

Juan insolently declared he didn't know and didn't care.

"Oh, you don't, eh?" Law reached for the boy, and shook him until he yelled. "You will make a nice little prisoner, Juanito, and we shall find a way to make you speak."

Gonzalez was inclined to resent such high-handed treatment of his underling, but respect for the Rangers was deep-rooted, and Juan's behavior was inexplicable.

At last the horseboy confessed. He had seen both horse and rider, but knew neither. Mr. Austin and the stranger had arrived together, and the latter had gone on. That was the truth.

"Bueno!" Law released his prisoner, who slunk away rubbing his shoulder. "Now, Benito, we will find Mr. Austin."

A voice answered from the dusk: "He won't take much finding," and Ed Austin himself emerged from the stable door. "Well, what do you want?"

"You are Mr. Austin, I reckon?"

"I am. What do you mean by abusing my help?" The master of Las Palmas approached so near that his threatening scowl was visible. "I don't allow strangers to prow around my premises."

Amazed by this hostile greeting, Law explained in a word the reason for his presence.

"I don't know anything about your man. What do you want him for, and who are you?"

Dinner Stories

Miss Fortyodd awoke in the middle of the night to find a curleer ransacking her effects. Miss Fortyodd did not scream, for she prided herself, among other things, upon her composure.

Pointing to the door with a dramatic gesture, she exclaimed: "Leave me at once, and get out of my room!"

The burglar politely retreated a step, and said: "I had no intention of taking you."

Frank R. Christman says that after six hoboes had accosted him in three blocks the other night on Broadway, to relate harrowing tales of hard luck, all having the same plot, a battered derelict, whose appearance gave mute evidence of an extended feud with all brands and classes of the soap family, stopped him and said:

"Just a minute, captain. On de square, now, I ain't no hobo and I don't want de nickel to buy booze or de pads bridge. I wants to get home to me mudder, who ain't seen me fater fer ten long years."

Christman, after giving the fellow the once over, gave him a dime and said: "I believe you are telling the truth. Take this dime, get a bar of good soap and then give that old mother of yours another sight of her boy's face."

"I'd like that tooth, please," said the small boy, after the dentist had extracted the torment.

"Certainly, my little man. But why do you want it?" queried the dentist as he handed it over.

"Well, sir," responded the gratified boy, "I'm going to take it home, and I'm going to put it on a plate, and I'm going to stuff it full of sugar, and then—with a triumphant and ghastly savagery—"I'm going to watch it ache!"

GINGLES' JINGLES

HOME. There is nothing so important, there is nothing quite as fine as a happy, cheerful, pleasant home of treasures it's a mine; it has everything to offer we should want or should expect, and the comforts that it gives us we should cherish and protect. And we should not be so busy that we could not think it over, could not give it our attention for the good it has in store; for it's all we have to look to, all the world has to extend, thus we should to be loyal, the importance comprehend. And should aim to do our utmost, making it the place we should, making it a spot of sunshine, doing everything we could to improve it and sustain it in the very best of style, making those within it merry, glad and joyous all the while. It in turn bestows a blessing, greatest earth can ever give, handing us a rare enchantment—making it a Living Gingle joy to live.

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study with his patients.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

They start the bile and overcome constipation. That's why millions of boxes are sold annually at 10c and 25c per box. All druggists. Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results.

NEW ENGINEERING FRAT ORGANIZED AT 'VARSITY'

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., March 2.—A new national engineering fraternity has been installed at the University of Wisconsin. Theta Xi is the name of the new organization, which grew from a local society formed last year.

The fraternity has twenty chapters distributed among the leading technical schools of the country. The installation of the Wisconsin chapter will be held in two weeks. Dean F. E. Turneure of the engineering school is an alumnus of the organization at Washington University.

Diet, Exercise or Death?

An eminent medical authority writes that most city folk die of a thickening of the arteries or of kidney disease. The kidneys become clogged, do not filter the poisons from the blood, and one trouble follows another, high blood pressure damages the heart, arteries and kidneys. Usually its danger signals are backache, pain here or there, swollen feet or ankles, rheumatic twinges or spots appearing before the eyes.

The best remedy is this: Eat meat but once a day, or not at all. Plenty of outdoor exercise, and drink pure water frequently. Before meals take Anuric, the great uric acid neutralizer, obtainable at drug stores. When you have dizziness, chills or sweating, worry, or dragging pains in back, try this wonderful enemy to uric acid, which Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., discovered and named Anuric. Many sugars.

Anuric, the great uric acid neutralizer, dissolves uric acid as hot water does industry from being tied up, for despite the light snow fall, absence of thaws has made loggers' activities possible. Work will be hampered and in some cases stopped as soon as "hawing" begins. Shortage of men who will soon begin to leave the camps for cities to get in on the opening of spring building is also expected to slow up operations in Northern Wisconsin timber regions.

HALF DAY PUPIL PROBLEM ON FOND DU LAC SCHOOLS.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Fond du Lac, March 2.—It is the "half day" pupil rather than the truant who creates the problem for schools, according to Miss Frances Perkins, attendant supervisor of city schools, who gave an explanatory talk on her duties before a women's club here recently. The "half day" pupil, she said, was the one who was kept out of school to run errands or to do house work several times a week.

WISCONSIN WOMEN

Fond du Lac, Wis.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a very good medicine. When I was a girl going to school I got all run down and weak, due to hard studying. About the time I was coming into womanhood, and the 'Prescription' built me up in fine shape, in just a short space of time. I took it again about three years ago, during expectancy, and it helped me wonderfully. My sickness was very slight and my baby was strong and healthy and has always been."—Mrs. Carl Quell, Jr., 7th Street.

La Crosse, Wis.—"Some years ago I was in a terribly run-down condition. I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and it built me up in fine shape and cured me of the weakness which had so long troubled me. I am glad to commend this medicine."—Mrs. Chas. Horn, 1327 S. 4th Street.

The Right or Wrong of Prohibition is Not the Issue With Us

THESE articles are not designed to discuss the right or wrong of Prohibition. This is the discussion of a principle—the consideration of a fundamental truth.

If a really substantial majority of any community or state wishes to prohibit the manufacture or sale of our product let them do so, but they should not confiscate, or by their act, render our property valueless.

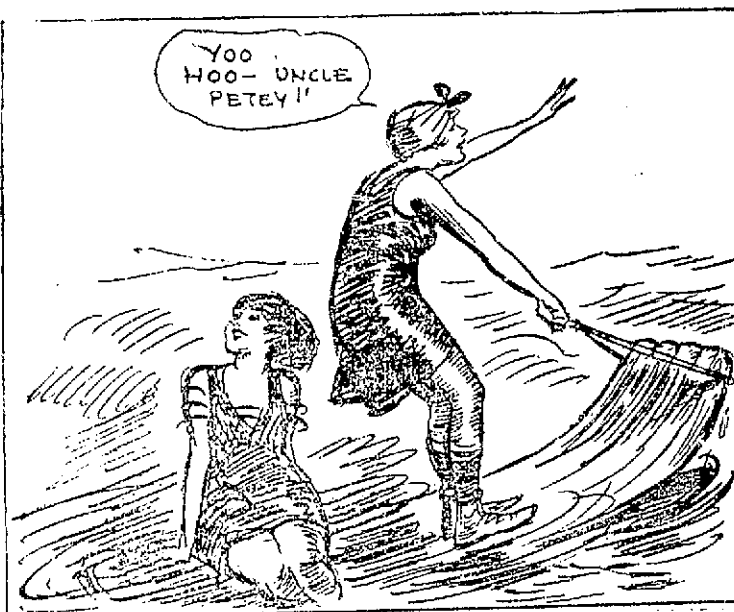

If you want a thing, buy it and pay for it. If you want Prohibition, what is the quickest and most effective way to secure it? To have the government buy up all plants used in the industry. That would end it and stop all sales—even the illegal ones. It would paralyze the source. It would make a permanent change. It would give you what you believe you want and do so in an honorable way. You buy and pay for what you get. That would even prevent the opportunity for illegal manufacture. And that is what you want if you really want Prohibition.

France, when she abolished a certain liquor industry, not only compensated the manufacturer and dealer but actually "went to the root of the evil" when she paid the farmer for his little patch of the raw material. That effectively ended the industry and ended it honestly and honorably.

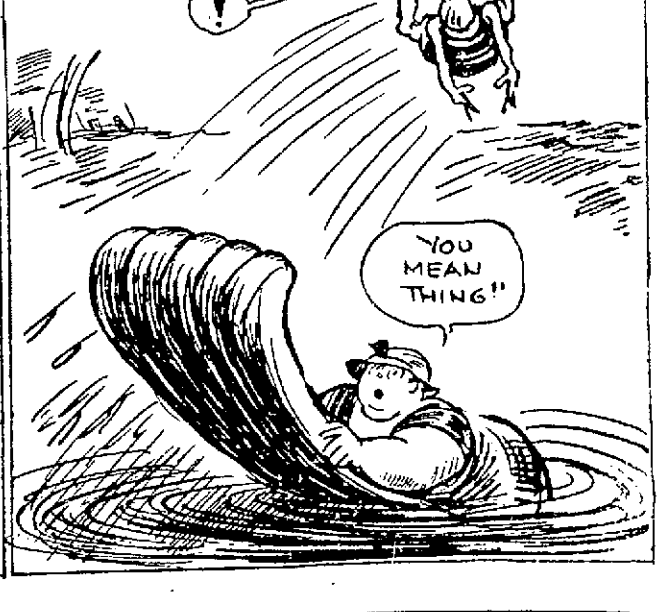

And France is staggering under an untold war debt.

Should not we in America uphold the principle of Compensation which is universally conceded to be fair, just and equitable?

REDS PINNING FAITH ON THEIR VETERANS

Cincinnati, O., March 2.—Baseball bugs in Cincinnati believe the destiny of the Reds, as far as 1917 is concerned, is in the hands of Christy Mathewson and his team.

Mathewson has a bunch of youthful pitchers to work with this season. If he can develop a star or two from among them, the Reds will have a formidable team. The club has a number of players who are veterans of the war, and they are expected to carry most of the burden.

The old master of the pitching hill will devote most of his time to the training camp, and to the pitching staff. The club has a number of players who are veterans of the war, and they are expected to carry most of the burden.

Mathewson will have charge of the training camp. He has only led the league last year, so he is pretty well qualified to give instructions on how to hit the elusive ball. He will also have charge of the pitching staff.

Some of the world's best pitchers are now in Cincinnati. The club has a number of players who are veterans of the war, and they are expected to carry most of the burden.

East Side Alleys

Because only Tom Welsh of Dan Higgins' Planter bowlers showed up at the East Side last night, the game scheduled with Billie's Stars, a challenge party originating with the Planter, the game was not played. It was to be another of those ten-minute affairs, with the losers to pay for the supper afterwards. The Millers split in two teams. Zimmermann's Colts and Lemke's Stars, and had a game themselves. The Colts were victorious, 1909 to 1902. Herman Bugge had prepared the feed, and after the game the Colts and the Stars did full justice with everything from lettuce to coffee. ENTER THREE "W" TRACK MEN IN ILLINOIS SPORT CARNIVAL

Madison, Wis., March 2.—Coach Tom Jones of the University of Wisconsin has decided to enter Tom Casey, dash man, in the Illinois sport carnival to be held at the University of Illinois. In the time trials, Casey performed in sterling fashion. He will start in the 70 yard dash and in the hurdle events. The addition of Casey means that the Badgers will send three men to the carnival. Captain Smith will enter the dashes and broad jump, while Meade Burke will enter the all-round contests.

There is some doubt as to whether the Red Sox pitchers will be as effective without Carrigan. The Red Sox generally are considered to have the finest pitching staff in the game, but much of the development and efficiency of the boxmen have been due to the handling of the former manager, Jack Barry. A wise baseball player, but he is an infielder and cannot be expected to know as much about pitchers as a smart catcher does.

MORRIS MILLER

The annual report of the national commission shows a considerable amount of money paid to the minor leagues for players by the major leagues. During the past season the Cleveland club paid the largest amount for minor league players. Owner Dunn parting with $32,000 and the will have to pay $8,000 additional if these players make good. This does not include the $50,000 paid for Tris Speaker in cash and players or the money paid for the two major league players Daly and Howard.

The Yankees paid more than $13,400 for minor league players, and stand to pay $6,900 additional in the event of these players being retained.

The Washington club canceled all its drafts, but spent $5,500 for players and must pay $5,700 more if they retain them. The White Sox spent $24,000 with a possibility of $13,500 additional in the event of all the players being retained. The Athletics spent $18,775, with the possibility of $7,000 more. Detroit spent $14,500 and $10,000 additional. Boston $15,200 and $3,600 additional.

In the National league, the Chicago Cubs spent the largest amount. It was $20,000, with $24,600 additional for purchased players. Cincinnati was next to the Giants and the Phillies paid out the least for drafted recruits.

The recent action made by Jack Hendricks, manager of the Indianapolis club of the American Association, to the effect that golf is robbing baseball of its patronage, has got a rise out of Conny Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics. Needless to say, Mack does not agree with Hendricks, in spite of the fact that he himself is an ardent devotee to the links.

In the first place, Mack contends that people who say the attendance has been falling off in the baseball game are talking about what they are talking about, and in the second place, the fact that golf is robbing baseball of its patronage, never will make a serious inroad on the baseball game. He also believes that the war will have little effect on baseball this season, but admits that if this country should be engaged in war this season, the baseball game would be closing the ball parks. At present, however, he sees no reason for alarm.

Mack says that golf is one of the most fascinating games he knows, but does not think that it is keeping the fans away from the ball parks. "As a matter of fact," he continues, "the attendance at major league games last year was greater than ever before, and the only ones kicking are those who did not share in the harvest. We did not have a very good year, but I don't attribute it to golf or any other sport."

Bobby Jones, the San Francisco third baseman, who is coming to beat his brother, Cal, in the California job, carrying a high recommendation from Fielder Jones. "Bobby Jones has a splendid record on the coast, and I think he will make good in the big league," said the St. Louis manager to President Navin in New York. Bobby can hit, is an exceptionally good fielder, an intelligent head of the ball and is fast on the bases. If Vitt continues as a hold-out Jones is very likely to make him hustle to get back his job when he returns to the game. Jones is a better hitter than Oscar, although not so good a fielder.

After viewing the cuts in their salaries some of the Brooklyn Robins concluded that there must be a hard boiled egg in the nest.

Jim Thorpe should be a good member of the fraternity. He has been on strikes times enough last season.

Weeghman says that he has $100,000 in the bank to be used in making the Cubs perennial winners. That's just about what Clark Griffith would charge him for Walter Johnson's left arm.

RUN UP 100,000 POINTS IN CRIBBAGE GAME PLAYED IN BOWELS OF THE EARTH

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS] Woodrow, Minn., March 2.—A cribbage game played in the bowels of the earth, and running up to 100,000 points, finished last night, played by Gus Raymond, miner, and William Gabriel, pumpman, of the Wilcox mine here. The sitting lasted six months. Raymond won by 207 points. The game was played in the pump house, 250 feet underground. Gabriel once held a "29" hand, which cribbage-mathematicians say happens about once in ten years of continuous playing.

MILWAUKEE REGRETS OPPORTUNITY MISSED

Milwaukee, Wis., March 2.—With gasoline costing the city 26½ cents a gallon for the 100 gallons daily necessary to run the city's fifty cars, Milwaukee city officials are lamenting the fact that they did not make a contract with an oil company two years ago for a gasoline supply. A long term contract for gas at 9 cents a gallon could have been signed then according to J. C. Spinnier, Jr., superintendent of public buildings, who has charge of the city motor cars.

COOPER HOLDS FIRM IN STAND OPPOSING GUNS ON U. S. SHIPS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, D. C., March 2.—The administration's measure empowering President Wilson to arm American ships and appropriating $100,000,000 for the purpose was passed by the house of representatives last night by a vote of 403 to 13. Opposition to the measure practically died out during the day, although a few members, notably Representatives Cooper of Wisconsin and Shackelford of Missouri, contended to the last that the enactment of the measure into law would be equivalent to a declaration of war against Germany.

"Suppose," said Congressman Cooper, in reply to a Republican Leader Mann, who made a stirring appeal in favor of the measure, "that we were struggling against a coalition trying to destroy this government of the people, by the people, and for the people; suppose we were fighting with a nation trying to destroy us—and there is not a monarch on earth that loves us; they tolerate us because they hate each other more."

Cites German Viewpoint. "What would we think if we were trying to defend this republic—the last hope of mankind on this earth—from destruction, and some nation from over on the other side of the water, a neutral nation, should, with much profession of a desire to be at peace, in a statute authorize the czar, the emperor, or the king to load a ship with naval runners and send that across the sea, conveyed by their ships, and with ammunition conveyed over on the other side of the water, to gentlemen who call us cowards."

"There is not a man in this chamber, if he is honest with himself and his conscience, who does not know, and knows that it would be considered an act of war if we were the party threatened by this ship with its ammunition to kill your brother, your father, your native."

Members Heckle Cooper. Commenting on the denunciation of Germany, Mr. Cooper said: "I have endeavored to make for Germany where she has committed atrocities, but is our indignation to be aroused only against her violations of international law? Has it been reserved to this day for us to become so indignant that we are willing to have ships loaded with ammunition and armed by the president of the United States?"

Some members of the house shouted at Mr. Cooper that he had German blood in his veins.

"I deny that," he replied, "but if I had I would not apologize for it, because there is no better blood in the world than the best German blood. And neither do I represent a pro-German constituency. As every member of this house knows, my constituency is pro-ally. The German-Americans in my district are in a minority, and a very considerable minority."

Madden Urges Preserving Honor. Representative Madden of Illinois, in discussing the measure, said it involved a great American question. "It does not mean war, as the gentleman from Wisconsin has said," Mr. Madden told the house. "I don't want war, and no American citizen does. But I want peace with honor. This measure merely instructs the president to preserve American honor and I want to aid him in doing so. We must preserve it at any cost, even though it may be the price of war."

U. S. MEXICAN POLICY MAKES LATIN FRIENDS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Buenos Aires, March 2.—Recent news dispatches from the United States indicating that President Wilson's forebearing policy toward Mexico was adopted to some extent in deference to South American public opinion have created an excellent impression in the southern republics.

For the first time since the Mexican situation became acute the Mexican is being made here that the United States government has been very patient under severe provocation. Whether this view would still be held in the event of fresh threats of intervention in Mexico is doubtful. It is a distinct change, however, from the hitherto generally expressed opinion that North American mistakes and deliberate mischief-making were responsible for all the Mexican troubles of the past few years.

That their wishes would be taken into account by the Washington administration, to tell the truth, was more than South Americans expected. From all appearances the president's attitude has done more to develop a friendly feeling on the southern continent toward the United States than anything in a generation.

At the present time work on the new physics building is progressing at a very slow rate. The contractors have been hindered by lack of material. It is the plan of Business Manager Thorkelson to have the building ready by the summer vacation in order that the moving of the apparatus from the old building can be done at that time. The first and second floors of the new building are about completed.

MILWAUKEE WORKHOUSE OPEN ABOUT MAY 1ST

Forty-one trustees are working on the workhouse farm and about three hundred other prisoners will be transferred as soon as the last building is completed.
